

I write to protest any lowering of the standards of decency used by the FCC in the regulation of non-cable broadcast television.

In fact, I would posit that the standards as to what is acceptable on the air ought to be much stricter than they currently are.

Many television shows on the major networks are violent, sexualized and often of negative cultural value. This is not a trend the Federal government should encourage.